Logline

In the heat of a secluded summer, two young women fall into a tender, intoxicating romance at a lakeside cottage, But when one of them is consumed by religious guilt, their love turns into a fragile divide between desire, doctrine and devotion.

Ava

Ava (20) is a thoughtful and deeply sensitive young woman caught between desire and devotion. Raised in a strict Catholic family, she returns to her late grandmother's manor, hoping to spend a quiet summer with her friend, only to find herself caught between her faith and a love she can no longer deny. She struggles to navigate the expectations she has inherited while searching for a version of herself that feels honest and free. For the first time, she is forced to question whether the life she was taught to want is truly her own.

Requirements: English speaking (preferably no accent), willing to shoot intimate scenes (kiss and implied sex scene)

Holes

Junia

Junia (21) is warm, intuitive, and emotionally open. Spending the summer at Ava's family manor, she finds herself falling in love with her best friend and embracing the possibility of a future neither of them had imagined before. While Ava wrestles with doubt, Junia becomes an anchor. Patient, understanding, and unwilling to see their love as something shameful. She is not naive, she senses Ava's internal war, but she hopes love might be enough. As Ava retreats further into fear and uncertainty, Junia risks losing both the relationship she longs for and the friendship she treasures most. Her arc is defined by discovery and loss, and by the realization that sometimes love cannot save someone from themselves.
